

PASTOR SCORES SENATOR HANNA

"Ignorant of Both Poker and Socialism."

"HIS PATRIOTISM SELFISH"

Considers Questions of Humanity in Light of His Own Pocketbook, Says Mr. Kent.

"We hold the ace," is a sentence which has been much discussed recently. It was originally ascribed to Senator Hanna, but he denied the allegation. Notwithstanding this, the junior Senator from Ohio received a theoretical raking, for and aft, in a sermon delivered yesterday morning by the Rev. Alexander Kent, at the People's Church, in Sixth Street northwest.

The pastor did not take into consideration the fact that Senator Hanna denied having said "We hold the ace." The Senator was scored in consequence, because he "knows as little about socialism as he does about poker."

Knows Game of Business.

"Nearly 2,000 years ago," said Dr. Kent, "away over in Judea there was another man who had a following among the people, many of whom regarded him as the coming ruler and deliverer of their nation. I do not suppose he knew any more about poker than Senator Hanna, but he knew enough not to draw his illustrations from things of which he was ignorant."

"Like Senator Dilliver, he is in the game of business, internationally, ostensibly for the United States, but really beyond question chiefly for himself. He has patriotism enough to push a scheme in the national interest if it promises to draw a few millions in his own pocket, but he has no humanity enough to consider the bearing of any American policy on the future of millions of other lands. Nor has he enough faith in the moral order of the universe to understand that financial prosperity won at the cost of justice and humanity is also won at the cost of the real power and perseverance of the nation."

Could Join Sect.

"Senator Hanna says the menace of today is the spread of a spirit of socialism. He then proceeds to show that he doesn't know any more about socialism than he does about poker by saying that 'fairness and justice will never agree to the confiscation of the products of one man's toil in order to insure comfort to the idle and worthless. No 'ism' is worth the sacrifice of the people that will take from any citizen the just and equitable reward of his labor."

"This, instead of being, as it is intended, a knock-out blow for socialism, is a very good declaration of the Socialist faith, and if Senator Hanna would only stand squarely by the logic of this statement, he would soon be recognized as a worthy comrade."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERMON UPON LOVE

Based Upon Scripture Texts and Mrs. Eddy's Treatise.

The sermon yesterday in the two Christian Science Churches was on "Love," and consisted of Scriptural references interpreted by selections from Mrs. Eddy's "Science and Health." These explained the fact that God, Divine Mind, is the only intelligence, power and love of the universe who governs all things well, and who is universal goodness.

Only as we understand the principle of love, can we love our neighbor as ourselves. We cannot love error or matter. Love is the building of the law. It alone gives us power by enabling us to reflect the one power; it alone subdues, purifies, perfects, elevates, it conquers and destroys error and sin, and redeems man.

THE LATE ALEXANDER R. SHEPHERD.

Last Governor of the District of Columbia, who gave most potent impetus to municipal progress.

SHEPHERD'S REMAINS IN IMPOSING TOMB

Taken From Temporary Vault and Redeposited, Without Public Ceremony, in Rock Creek Cemetery---Entire Family Present.

In a newly built tomb of imposing appearance facing out toward the very manner in which he was born, at the east entrance to Rock Creek Cemetery, the remains of former Governor Alexander R. Shepherd, whose death occurred in Mexico, were laid to rest this afternoon.

The remains have been resting in a temporary vault. They were removed at 2 o'clock. There was no public observance of the event, due to the expressed desire on the part of Mrs. Shepherd, widow of the deceased, who desired the removal to be conducted as quietly as possible. The entire Shepherd family, gathered from New York and Mexico, was here, however, and the widow and sons and daughter of the deceased stood reverently by the tomb while the casket was sealed in the crypt.

Former Public Observance.

Governor Shepherd's body was brought here eight months ago from Batavia, Mexico, and was placed in the Crosby Noyes vault at the west side of Rock Creek Cemetery. At the time of the arrival there was a general public observance, District officials being closed and officials taking part in the ceremonies.

Today the removal of the body was conducted under the direction of Undertaker W. P. Speare, and W. P. Kyle, the Washington manager of the Van Amringe Granite Company, by which the new tomb was built.

Mr. Kyle opened the door of the Noyes vault and in the outer chapel of the tomb the mahogany box containing Governor Shepherd's body was disclosed. It was in this box that the casket made the long trip across the forest trails of the Sierra Madre Mountains and thence by train to Washington.

Undertaker Speare and his assistants, by direction of Mrs. Shepherd, removed the outer casing, leaving the metallic-lined casket, perfectly preserved, exposed to view. From the vault the casket was then carried in a hearse to the east side of the cemetery. It was carefully placed in a crypt, which was then sealed, and the ceremony was concluded.

In Washington, Governor Shepherd's achievements are familiar to everyone. It has been said that the whole city is a monument to him. Under the old form of Territorial government in the District, Mr. Shepherd was made Governor under President Grant. He at once undertook a magnificent scheme of public improvements for the District Capital, which transformed it into the present beautiful city. The funds were raised by the issuance of bonds, which capitalists took. Not only was the movement begun by him, but he personally supervised the engineering system, which made possible the present streets, developing parks and in general making possible the beautifying of the city as contemplated and laid out by L'Enfant.

One Plan Failed.

One of Governor Shepherd's plans, which he failed to carry out, however, was that of raising Pennsylvania Avenue to a grade four or five feet higher than at present to prevent danger of food in the southern section, and to make a grand boulevard of the thoroughfare. Retiring from public life in Washington, Governor Shepherd went to Mexico and developed rich silver mines there, which property has now passed to the hands of his sons—Alexander, Grant, and Conness—all of whom are here today.

The tomb in which the body now lies is of handsome appearance. It is constructed of granite, quarried in large blocks, and is seventeen feet six inches long and fourteen feet high. The prevailing style is Grecian Doric, with handsome columns in front. There are two crypts and the walls and ceiling of the tomb are finished in Rubio marble. The Van Amringe Company, which built the tomb, has erected large battlefields memorials at Gettysburg and Chickamauga.

Jews May Block Loan If Czar Declares War

Israelite Bankers Seek to Make Arrangements by Which Aid Will Be Refused Governments Encouraging Anti-Semitic Movements.

BERLIN, Jan. 25.—A movement has been started among prominent Jewish financiers in several European capitals, including Berlin, to prevent countries whose governments systematically encourage anti-Semitism from obtaining required loans.

Jewish financiers possess so much influence in the money markets of Berlin, London, Paris, etc., that a big loan is impossible without Jewish gold. On the other hand, the two countries which are most in need of foreign loans—Russia and Roumania—are those in which official Jew-baiting is most prevalent. In the event of war with Japan, Russia would be seriously embarrassed by an organized financial boycott.

It remains to be seen whether this boycott can be carried out. If Jewish financiers in Europe are able to come to an arrangement, Israelite bankers in New York will be subsequently invited to co-operate in the movement.

CORRESPONDENT GUYS ONE CAPITOL GUIDE

Sized Up Newspaper Man as Stranger and Sought to Show Him Over the Big Building.

"Spotting" visitors to the Capitol and showing them the sights of the great building for a financial consideration has become such a matter of routine with certain Capitol guides that they have ceased to be as circumspect as they are popularly supposed to be.

Any visitor to the Hill nowadays is apt to be approached by these dispensers of information, and given the suggestion that by action or appearance they have betrayed the fact of their rural origin and had better secure a guide before they find themselves bunched in the Capital City of the nation.

A correspondent for a daily paper had an experience of this sort at the Capitol the other day. He had stopped for one of the big elevators which carry visitors to the gallery floor and looked up to see if it were descending. He had no sooner done so than a guide, possibly mistaking the movement for interest in the construction of the building, hid himself noiselessly to the correspondent's side. Here is a part of what he said before the correspondent could find it in his heart to dispel the guide's enthusiasm and hope:

"Show you about the building? Lots of things here you'd never happen on without some one to point them out to you. Very interesting place. Only way to go away satisfied you've seen the whole thing! Saves your time, costs little money. Ever been here before?"

Suppressing a yawn the correspondent said:

"Yes, I've been here once or twice."

"Haven't seen it all, probably," quickly broke in the guide. "Some little you can't miss seeing. More, though, you never had any idea of unless it's shown to you by a good guide. You'll never forget—"

Here the correspondent's compassion moved him to end the guide's waste of mechanical speech, and entirely apart from resenting the asseveration of the superiority of the guide, he said:

"Well, I've been in the press gallery about a dozen years," he drawled out. "Oh, well, then," responded the guide with alacrity. "No harm done. Never can tell all the people who have been here and know all about the building. What do you think about the weather?"

"Ask Prof. Moore," was the only response, as the elevator started upward with the correspondent inside.

WITH BULLET THROUGH HEAD, GIRL EATS SOUP

Mary Meholie Was Supposed to Have Been Killed, But She Revives.

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Jan. 25.—With a bullet hole in her head, extending from temple to temple, Mary Meholie was found eating vegetable soup at her home recently by Coroner Hogan, who went to the house to investigate the details of her reported death.

The physician who is attending the young Hungarian girl says that she probably will recover.

The girl was a bridemaid at a wedding, and while on her way home with a party of young persons was shot by John Hudock.

The man was arrested and is in jail, though he says that he fired his revolver in a spirit of frolic, supposing the weapon was empty. The ball that struck Miss Meholie in the head first went through his hand.

It was thought at the time that the girl had been killed.

SHE HAS HYDROPHOBIA, THOUGH NEVER BITTEN

Mystery Involved in Terrible Plight of York County Woman.

YORK, Pa., Jan. 25.—North York, a village near here, has a mysterious case of hydrophobia. Mrs. W. T. Connor, the wife of a shoemaker, is the patient.

Mrs. Connor has no knowledge of ever having been bitten by a dog or other animal, yet for twenty-four hours she has been suffering from what has been diagnosed as hydrophobia, with convulsions.

Six weeks ago a pet dog owned by the Connor family died from rabies, and the physicians held the theory that Mrs. Connor must have come in contact with the virus in handling something infected by the dog, and that it was introduced in her system through a scratch on the hand.

The dog had been allowed to roam through the Connor home before the nature of its disease was discovered.

HARBOR BOATS CLEAR CHANNELS

All Danger of Flood Now Considered Past.

ICE WORKED BELOW BRIDGES

Small Jam Near Aqueduct Alarmed Dwellers Along River Front for a While.

Danger of flood is past, thanks to the energetic efforts of "Commodore" Sutton and his fleet of tug boats. It is regarded as impossible for a flood to occur at this time, or until the river shall freeze and thaw again, when the same precautions would be repeated, with the same prospect of success.

Yesterday's work consisted of working the ice down below Long Bridge. On Saturday this ice, from the Aqueduct to the Long Bridge, had been broken up, but it was impossible to clear the river below the Columbia Boat House, owing to the obstruction presented by the alternating old and new piers, and the piles for the temporary structure of the new bridge. By sending four tugs back and forth all day long, almost all of this ice was worked below the bridge and the remainder is being attended to today.

Jam Above Bridge.

Yesterday "Commodore" Sutton took his boats above Aqueduct Bridge as far as the Three Sisters, cutting the ice. He did not dare go higher, for the ice, though but a couple of inches thick at Long Bridge, was nine inches in thickness at these rocks, and the current was so strong that he was afraid to risk a boat above them. Last night a small jam formed just above the bridge, and the dwellers on the river front, fearing the consequences, went out in small boats with crowbars and broke the ice, although the Harbormaster states that at no time was there any real danger. Today a boat will be stationed above the Aqueduct Bridge to ease the ice below, just as has been done at Long Bridge.

The ice in the Tidal Basin was also broken up yesterday. Here it was five inches thick. In making a turn with the Vigilant the jam was such that the steering wheel was broken off and the boat was left helpless. The tug Minerva went to her rescue and hauled her to the wharf. Today the wheel was replaced.
